Middleton Place is one of South Carolina's most important historic sites. First granted in 1675, only five years after the first English colonists arrived in the Carolinas, this National Historic Landmark connects to the very fabric of our nation's complex history. For over two and a half centuries, these manicured landscaped gardens have welcomed visitors from all over the world. As you walk the same footpaths as did pre-Revolutionary statesmen, we recognize and celebrate the achievements of hundreds of enslaved people who built and maintained these gardens.

Drayton Hall, circa 1738, is America's oldest unrestored plantation house open to the public. Renowned for its Palladian-inspired architecture, this 18th-century architectural masterpiece stands alone as the only authentic survivor of the Ashley River's colonial past - intact and in near-original condition with no modern amenities. A National Historic Landmark and a historic site of the National Trust for Historic Preservation, the entire site - including the historic grounds with its ancient live oaks, broad vistas, vanished structures, and rare period features - serves as a testimony to America's heritage.
